

Splat

Splat is a concentration game and is easy to explain

The group stand in a circle and hold imaginary guns pointing down at the floor, the leader or catechist calls out a name of a young person let's say "John" who has to duck and the young person standing next to John have to turn and shoot one another with their imaginary guns shouting "splat" Whoever is quickest to turn and point at the other person stays in the game, while the slowest to react is out. Also If someone accidentally ducks or shoots when they were not supposed to be doing so then they are also out.

When there are only two people left they have to draw against each other, so they have their backs against each other and walk away until a word is shouted out to signal that they should draw against each other. Whoever is quickest to draw and say splat wins the game.

